Long (≈ 200 words)

Never Roam Alone is a free travel companion for anyone planning a trip, whether that is one person, a couple, a family or a group of friends. The site's promise is in the name: wherever you go, and whoever you go with, you carry the collected knowledge of travelers and locals who have already been there.

At its center are 893 city guides covering 197 countries. Each guide is organized the way a traveler thinks: how long to stay, when to go, which neighborhoods to sleep in (with lodging at every price tier), what a day really costs in local currency, how safe and walkable the city is, how comfortable it feels to explore (including dedicated solo-comfort and women-traveling-solo ratings), how to get in from the airport and around town, what the phone and Wi-Fi situation is, which plug to pack, and which day trips are worth the train ticket. Guides also carry top sights, upcoming events, common phrases, and first-hand "Traveler's Take" and "Local's Perspective" notes.

Around the guides are free planning tools: an interactive world map sized by annual visitors, a Destination Finder that matches cities to your budget, travel time and season, side-by-side city comparisons, a monthly "where to go" guide, underrated picks, a trip planner, and Ask A Roamer, a Q&A answered by travelers who have been there. The interface is available in English, Spanish, French, Italian and Chinese.
